A tongue-in-cheek ending tops off this quirky reimagining of “Little Red Riding Hood.” Alberta is a dreadful child; rude and unapologetic, she always gets her way—even if she has to throw a tantrum to get it. After a hooded figure in the woods tells her about a freshly baked birthday cake, Alberta sneaks off to eat the cake when the stranger falls asleep. Catching Alberta in the act, the stranger reveals a big nose, big eyes, and a set of very big teeth.
