First published in Hebrew, this amusing picture book tracks a girl and her father as he valiantly tries to get her to sleep. Having only two legs, Shabbat coming every seven days, and things falling down rather than up are just a few of the things that Naomi wants to express gratitude for; her father, on the other hand, would appreciate some rest. Bright red pairs with muted yellow and green in illustrations that depict Naomi's musings—and her father's drooping eyes.
