In this warm bedtime story, the animals of the African savanna are winding down for sleep—all except one boisterous pink elephant who insists that sleeping is not for him. Littlephant doesn't care that the giraffes, snakes, and hyenas are asleep; he is determined to play, and no one will get any rest until he is satisfied. As Daddyphant's lullaby slowly takes effect, the other animals can't resist a little well-intentioned revenge to prove a point about the importance of sleep.
